

November 26, 2008

I have had the pleasure of working with Dave Guenther for more than 15 years. I first began working with Dave when he was Chief Financial Officer for Inacom. Dave was one of the founders of Inacom and during an 18 year period helped grow Inacom from a small subsidiary to a publicly-traded Fortune 150 company. I assisted Dave with public relations and investor relations services, and watched as Inacom generated excellent profits and transformed from a computer distributor to a technology management services company.

During the 1990s Inacom received an award for the most significant stock growth of any Nebraska company, and was featured in Forbes Magazine. Dave served as one of the company's top spokespeople, appearing regularly on national business news shows such as Bloomberg.

Inacom became a victim in the late 1990s to the rapid changes in the technology world and closed its doors. While early fingers pointed at the CFO's office for the company's financial failures, Dave was completely vindicated of any wrongdoing and his story of perseverance was featured in the Omaha World-Herald.

In recent years Dave has taken another Nebraska company, RTG Medical, from a small medical temporary staffing firm to a national leader in this industry. RTG has twice been recognized on Inc. 500's list of the fastest growing private companies in the U.S.

Dave Guenther has consistently demonstrated his ability to identify growth opportunities, arrange financing and the capital needed to fuel that growth, and help set a direction for financial success. He combines strategic thinking with outstanding financial skills, an invaluable combination in helping companies establish and achieve long-term goals.

He also has experienced first-hand the importance of board governance and what a board should, and should not do, during challenging economic times.

Sincerely,

Doug Parrott
